29 AUTO SHOW TO OPEN HERE FEBRUARY 10TH

Local Dealers Enthusiastic Over Prospects For Another Successful Display.

The fifth annual automobile show, sponsored by the Adams County Automobile Dealers' association, will be held during the second week of February. Decision to hold the annual display of automobiles, tires, gasolines, oils, accessories and allied automotive products during the week, beginning February 10, was reached at a meeting of the dealers' association in the arbitration room at the court house, Friday evening.

Dinner Thursday

The dealers also decided to hold dinner here next Thursday evening, which, it is hoped, every member of the association will attend. At this dinner, the place for which will be announced later, the dealers will decide where the fifth automobile show will be held. Election of officers also will be an item of business for transaction at next week's dinner meeting.

Edward L. Weikert, Jr., president of the dealers' association, presided at the Friday evening meeting, which was rather poorly attended because of the inclement weather. Mr. Weikert said the dealers were enthusiastic over the prospect of holding their annual show, predicting great interest among the general public in the models to be exhibited.

28 Show a Success

Final arrangements for the automobile show will be made at next Thursday's dinner meeting. President Weikert urged every one of the twenty-one members in the county association to be present at the meeting so that all may share in the discussions and help in the election of officers.

The 1928 show was held at the Gettysburg Buick garage, York street, and was considered a successful affair.

Arendtsville Five Loses Close Game In Extra Period

Arendtsville's basketball team went out of their class Friday night and battled the Hanover high school team on even terms for the full game. In the extra period, two baskets were caged by the Adams countians, but were not allowed. Witmer's field goal settled the session with Hanover on the long end of the score.

Hanover opened the game with several substitutes, underestimating the strength of the Arendtsville five. After a few minutes, thearsity squad was rushed into the game and the first half closed with the local countians trailing by only two points.

Myers, Lower, T. Raffensperger, J. Raffensperger and W. Raffensperger comprised the Arendtsville line-up with Miller, Shultz, Smith, Witmer and Ernst representing Hanover.

MANY CASES OF GRIPPE HERE

Physicians Declare There Are No Authentic Cases Of Influenza In This Vicinity.

Although gripe is prevalent in Gettysburg and Adams county, no authentic cases of influenza have been reported, according to an inquiry among local physicians by The Gettysburg Times. Influenza, according to Surgeon General Cumming, of the United States army, is a severe attack of gripe, with complications.

According to local physicians, more than 100 cases of gripe are being treated in Gettysburg and vicinity, but none of the patients has complications, which would inspire a diagnosis of influenza.

In his rules to avoid the disease the surgeon general issued a warning against mingling with crowds and especially coming in contact with persons "who are coughing, sneezing or snuffling." He also warned against using unsterilized napkins, towels and eating utensils, and against eating before washing the hands or putting the fingers into the mouth.

He advised getting as much sunshine as possible, sleeping with windows open, keeping away from houses in which there are cases of influenza, and keeping up general health by sleeping at least seven hours, eating wholesome food, and using "plenty of clean water, inside and outside."

Call Physician at Once "In case you do contract the disease," he concluded, "go to bed as soon as symptoms develop, and remain there until you are completely recovered. Call a physician at once."

Surgeon General Cumming traced occurrences of influenza, and the causes suggested for it, from the time when Hippocrates, the Greek physician, in 400 B. C., attributed it to changes in the wind.

He said influenza and gripe are one and the same thing, and explained that, while influenza itself has "probably never been fatal," its complications cause a "serious and devastating" condition.

25,000 LEGAL KILL OF DEER; SEASON CLOSES

Illegal Kill Reported To Be Approximately 2,000; Sportsmen Divided.

At exactly 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, the highly-controversial deer season of 1928 closed.

The season was unique in that while the state game commission threw open fifty-four counties to the shooting of deer and antlerless deer, seven counties were closed to the slaughter of such animals, after the season opened, by court injunctions sought by sportsmen's organizations.

Criticism Commission Sportsmen were divided on the benefits of the open season, and doubted the authority of the game commission in designating such a season. Some hunters said the game commission had no set program, with the result that bucks, fawns and under-sized deer were killed in large numbers throughout the state.

The game commission meets this charge with a statement that the kill of illegal deer will be not more than 2,000 in the state, a figure smaller than the illegal kill of some former years when deer were illegal kills. The game commission also points out that the effects of the deer season will be seen in future years in better stock of both doe and bucks.

25,000 Legal Kill Most of the camps on the east slopes of the South Mountains in Adams county were closed before today. With the camp limit removed, many of the hunting groups shot as many as fifteen, eighteen and twenty does.

The legal kill in Pennsylvania during the first ten days of the season was estimated at 21,000, with the grand total expected to approximate 25,000.

One of the few women in the state who can boast of bringing down a doe this season is Mrs. William H. Smyser, York, who bagged a fine specimen, Wednesday, while hunting with her husband and other members of the Coneago Springs hunting camp in Franklin township, west of here.

400 AT HIGH SCHOOL PLAY FRIDAY NIGHT

Local Students Aibly Present "Seventeen." Popular Comedy, Last Evening.

"Seventeen," that age when a boy is too old to be a boy anymore and too young to be a man, was ably portrayed last night in the Gettysburg high school auditorium, by the dramatic club of the school. Edward Bullett, as "William Sylvanus Baxter," the boy just seventeen and going on eighteen, needed a dress suit. And thus, the adventures that he encountered in getting one led to many complications that finally ended with his being satisfied to be a boy just seventeen. An audience of 400 filled the auditorium.

Sister Disturbs Willie

Even though "Willie's" parents objected to his conduct and the things he said and did, the person to worry him most was his sister, "Jane." Miss Anne Keet, who was continually telling tales and acting as a thorn in the side of "Willie." Her efforts to watch all the actions of her brother and to tell the family about him caused many scenes that are typical for brothers and sisters to have. Almost at "Jane's" every turn, the audience was struck with her realistic portrayal of the character. Life and humor were evident in the part that Miss Keet ably filled.

However, "Willie's" chief difficulties did not arise until a "Lola Pratt" came to visit her girl friend, "May Parker." Miss Frances Eberhart and Miss Grace Durbow, respectively, filled these parts. And so, "Willie," caught by the enticing "baby talk" and the poodle dog of "Lola Pratt," immediately fell in love with her. "Willie" was an ardent lover until the night of "Lola's" departure, when he became reconciled to the fact that a boy of seventeen is apt to have many disappointments at that age.

Other Characters

Through the medium of his slow southern dialect, "Genesis," Augustus Menchey, the colored servant, was able to give much advice to "William" concerning marriage and the things about domestic life. Among the other characters were: "Mr. Baxter," Robert Codori; "Joe Bullit," William Swisher; "Johnnie Watson," Albert Bell; "George Cooper," Gilbert Myers; "Mr. Parker," John Kadel; "Wallie Banks," Norman Werwick; "Mrs. Baxter," Miss Kathryn Fissel; "Ethel Baker," Miss Jennie Craumer and "Mary Brooks," Miss Angela Stock.

The proceeds will be given to the athletic association of the high school.

James made the flight to win a $1,000 prize offered for the first pilot under 18 years of age to fly a plane alone across the country. Several forced landings were made on the journey. Poor flying weather and damages necessitated by these forced landings accounted for the month and a half taken for the flight.

New License Tags Are Legal Today

Orange figures on blue automobile license tags will replace the 1928 variety of blue on orange on many Pennsylvania vehicles today.

Only 470,000 of the 1,700,000 car owners in the state have made application for their 1929 plates at the State Motor Vehicle Bureau, however, and since the law permits use of the old plates until January 1, the abundance of new tags visible today probably will not be heavy.

A standing line of unparalleled length and weariness, and thousands of automobile drivers forced to leave their cars at home January 1, are anticipated by the State Motor Vehicle Registrar as a result of the delayed applications.

From now until 1929 comes in, the rush for the new tags is expected to grow. An increase in the total number of licensed cars in the state is in protest for 1929. Yet the number of applicants for next year's tags is running behind last season's quota.

CORONER'S JURY FREES YOUTH IN CRASH FATALITY

J. Donald Hamm, Student At Gettysburg College, Exonerated At Inquest.

At the inquest into the death of Mrs. Beulah Laughman, Hanover Route 6, held Friday evening, in Hanover, the jury returned a verdict that she came to her death at the Hanover hospital December 1 "as the result of injuries she sustained when she was hit by a machine driven by J. Donald Hamm. According to evidence heard, the jury finds that it was an unavoidable accident, and that the driver of said car is exonerated from all blame whatsoever." Hamm is a student at Gettysburg college.

Coroner L. U. Zech, who conducted the inquest, stated that he would recommend the return of Hamm's automobile driver's license, which, under the state law now in effect, is automatically revoked following a fatal accident.

Blinded By Lights

Testimony given by the witnesses at the inquest showed that Mrs. Laughman and her 10-year-old sister, Dorothy Laughman, were walking hand in hand on the Carlisle road just beyond the borough limits when the automobile driven by Hamm struck the woman from the rear. Hamm stated that he was blinded by the headlights of an automobile approaching him, and did not see the couple walking along the road until it was too late to avoid hitting them. Immediately following the accident, Hamm placed the injured woman in his car and drove to the Hanover hospital. He then reported the accident to the Hanover police department, and later drove to the Laughman home to bring the husband of the stricken woman to the hospital. He was traveling at about 30 miles per hour, he said, when the accident occurred.

Companion Unhurt

Hamm's story was substantiated by the other witnesses, who were Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Adler, Harrisburg; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Myers and son, New Oxford; Dorothy Laughman and Officer Wolford. The sister of the dead woman, although she was holding Mrs. Laughman's hand at the time when the automobile struck her, was uninjured.

The inquest was held in the office of Justice of the Peace Sell. The jury was composed of Cletus Bortner, Oscar Kinneman, William Little, Jesse Crabbs, Howard D. Garrett and H. N. Gitt, 2nd.

Young Hamm is 20 years old.

BULLETS LOSE

27-26 CONFLICT

Rutgers Scores Field Goal In Last Eight Seconds To Over-Come One Point Margin.

(Special To The Times)

New Brunswick, N. J.—Dec. 15.—The Orange and Blue basketball five lost a hard fought game, the curtainer of the Gettysburg season, to the tune of 27 to 26. Rutgers, the Bullets' first opponents of the season, staged a last second rally and forged one point ahead of the Bream-coached tribe.

With the Bullets leading 26 to 25 and eight seconds to play, Rutgers spurted and a difficult angle shot, spun around the top-edge of the basket and settled through the net for the two-point marker that turned apparent defeat into victory for the New Jersey aggregation.

Hoke and Haller were the high scorers for the Gettysburg five, registering seven points each during the Rutgers contest. Angle-moyer substituted for Cramer, the only substitution made during the contest.

The Bullets meet the powerful Fordham aggregation this evening in New York.

C. E. Bilheimer, athletic director at college, attended a conference of the Middle Atlantic State Collegiate athletic association in the Hotel Adelphi, Philadelphia, today after which he left for New York to see the Orange and Blue battle the Fordham tribe.

BOULDER DAM

BILL IS PASSED

Party Lines Are Forgotten As Senate Endorses Measures By A Vote Of 64 To 11.

Washington, Dec. 15.—(AP)—The Swing-Johnson bill for a vast flood control, irrigation and power project on the Colorado River to cost $163,000,000 was passed by the Senate late Friday afternoon after a controversy that had extended throughout the better part of two administrations.

The measure, popularly known as the Boulder Canyon Dam bill, was approved by a vote of 64 to 11. It now must go to conference to compose differences between the bill passed by the House, in the last session and the one acted on Friday.

Signing Expected

If a favorable vote is taken by both House and Senate on the conference report, the measure will be sent to the president, who, sponsors of the bill believe, is in sympathy with its general provisions.

Party lines were obliterated in the final vote on passage. Thirty-two Democrats, thirty-one Republicans and the lone Farmer-Labor Senator—Shipstead, Minnesota—voted for the bill, and seven Republicans and four Democrats, including Hayden and Ashurst, Arizona, voted against it.

The Senate virtually took two votes on final passage, many Senators believing the vote on the substitution of the Senate bill for the House bill was the final ballot.

Some members left the floor, but Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, who voted against the substitution, demanded a roll call on final passage.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Nearly fifty per cent of the estate of the late James A. Patten, "wheat king," who died last week, eventually will go to charity, the Chicago Title and Trust company, named as executor and trustee, revealed today. The estate is estimated at $15,000,000 and an appraisal is being made.

Under the terms of the will Mrs. Amanda Louise Patten, the widow, will receive the net income of the estate during her lifetime after the payment of annuities of $10,000 each to John Lowrie Patten and Agnes Patten Wilder, a daughter, and monthly payments of $50 to Leontine Carlson, an old family servant.

Seven Charities To Share

On the death of the widow the estate is to be turned over by the trustee—one-fourth to the son, an equal share to the daughter and the remaining one-half to be divided among seven charities.

The charities to be benefited are: The Evanston Hospital Association, the Evanston Presbyterian Home, the United Charities of Chicago, the Chicago Old People's Home, the Chicago Visiting Nurse Association, the Glenwood Manual Training School of Chicago, and the Chicago Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

Sidelights

of New York

By G. D. SEYMOUR

New York—Richard Bennett's contract with the producer of "Jarnegan," in which he plays the central role, has a clause forbidding him to make curtain speeches.

The actor first got to lecturing his audiences 14 years ago, when he was in "Damaged Goods," a social problem drama which some play-goers found distasteful in theme, but in which Bennett deeply believed. Since then he has been the most ardent of the curtain lecturers, frequently taking ill-behaved audiences to task or berating critics for unkind words. Some months ago he carried his crusading beyond the stage, and appeared on the dance floor of a Broadway night club reading a Bible.

On the night "Jarnegan" opened, Bennett made a gracious curtain speech with permission from his employer—but when he continued to do so on following nights, with less good humor, it was suggested to him that an injunction might be necessary to silence him.

Alice Brady Remonstrates

A lot of theatre audiences deserve scolding for their behavior, but producers find that the actor who administers it often injures the play and his own popularity. It was news for the cables when Rosetta Duncan stopped a London performance the other night to upbraid noisy spectators in the orchestra circle, when Florence Reed stopped a performance of "Macbeth" in New York to have a laughing spectator ejected, and when Alice Brady stopped a performance at New Haven to ask a college boy crowd to behave better.

Miss Brady is always a jester, even when her curtain lectures are seriously meant. The incident in New Haven occurred when Yale fraternities had bought out the house, and the youths were roistering without intended disrespect. Miss Brady stepped to the front of the stage and said, "Boys, you needn't be sore because Maryland won the football game. If you'll behave until the show is over, I'll come out and sing you a song." They did, but she didn't.

Two years ago, in Wilmington, a play of Miss Brady's was all but halted when college boys who had bought out the galleries began to thump each other over the head with flour-filled socks.

Barrymore As Himself

John Barrymore in his stage days was an irrepressible curtain lecturer, but never by way of rebuking his audience. In Philadelphia, when he was touring in "Hamlet," he found Leopold Stokowski, orchestra conductor, in the house one night. Emerging between acts, after the tensest scene of the play, he said: "I'm glad you appreciate a great genius in your midst—I mean Leopold Stokowski!" He went on to praise the conductor's genius, and suddenly, with Machiavellian glee, exclaimed, "I wish to God we had him with this troupe." Just at that moment somebody in the gallery emitted a shivering cheer and Barrymore, flashing a look up toward the roof, shouted: "How did you get down from Hartford?"

And Raymond Hitchcock, emerging from the wings between the acts in any given town, says solemnly: "I'm always glad to be in your marvellously pleasant city, and my cast agrees with me that our visit here has been the pleasantest of our tour. You may be sure we shall always have a warm spot in our hearts for—" and then, peering with feigned alarm into the wings—"Joe, what the hell is the name of this town?"

DEALER LAUDS

EXIDE BATTERY

"Motorists often ask," said Mr. Oyer of the Oyer Tire company, the local Exide dealer, "why some batteries last longer than others. The answer is simple—they last longer because other things being equal, they get better care and attention."

"Now, a storage battery, as a rule, requires very little attention, but in these days of haste and bustle," continued Mr. Oyer, "it is easy for a motorist to forget the little black box hidden beneath the driver's seat. As a consequence, most batteries are grossly neglected. Unfortunately, this tendency seems to be growing every day."

"Once it is installed, the average motorist forgets his battery until it begins to give him trouble. Then, and not until then, he takes it to a service station for a 'going over.' Usually when this happens, he is in need of repair work and may be surprised at the size of his repair bill."

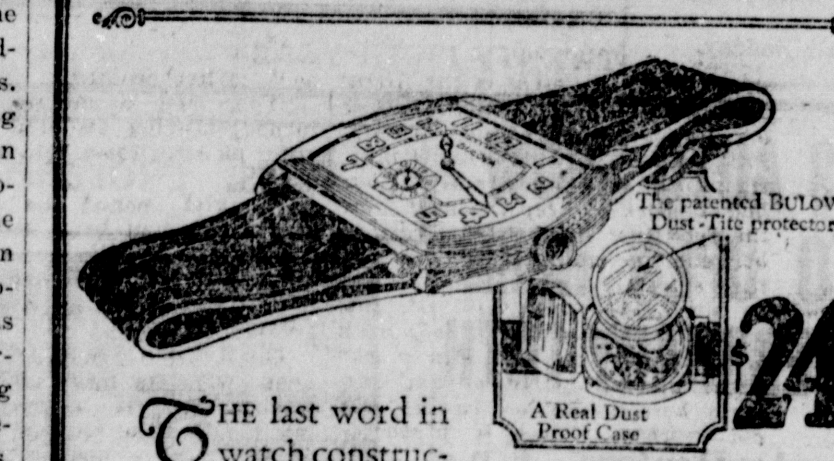

"Large battery repair bills are unnecessary. The engineers of the world's largest manufacturers of storage batteries, The Electric Storage Battery company—claims that a monthly inspection of a battery will go a long way toward insuring maximum life. Furthermore, it will do much to keep down the upkeep costs."

FANNIE BRICE MYMAN

By Arline de Haas

Copyright 1928 Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.
"MY MAN," starring Fannie Brice, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
In a little apartment in the Bronx of New York City Fanny Brice is bringing up her orphaned brother, Phil, and her sister, Audrey. Fanny, six years older than her sister, has had to work to keep the wolf from the door ever since she can remember, and her main desire is to save the extremely attractive Audrey from the same humdrum life she herself knows. Audrey is now a stenographer, but it is Fanny who keeps up the apartment and supports herself and her twelve year old brother. Fanny is preparing breakfast.

"Oh, dear," she moaned to herself. "I suppose I'll have to mend that tonight. Do hope Audrey don't see it. Can't afford a new carpet now, and Phil needs a new pair of shoes." Skillfully she manipulated a small runner of carpet with her foot until it covered the worn patch. "Looks better," she told herself, and went on about her breakfast tasks.

Once more her brother appeared, his ears and neck not quite thoroughly dry, but this time well scrubbed.

"Has Bicky been out this morning?" she inquired, glancing at the dog that followed, his tail wagging languorously.

"Nope. Gonna take him out after breakfast," Phil responded, taking his place at the table and attacking his cereal with gusto.

"Well, don't forget," Fanny sat down with her brother, wiping her hands on the gingham apron she had tied about her waist.

"I want some more cream, sis," Phil reached towards the bottle on the table.

"Just save enough for Audrey," she reminded the boy, pushing the container towards him.

Phil poured the cream with a generous hand and buttered some toast. He waited until he saw Fanny absorbed in her own food, and took a piece of the bread and butter and handed it down beneath the table to his constant companion, Bicky. Bicky made a little, joyous noise and snapped with his two rows of white teeth.

"I want some more cream," said Phil.

"Phil!" Fanny reprimanded. "How many times have I told you not to feed Bicky at the table?"

"I-I wasn't givin' him anything but some toast, sis," Phil cajoled.

"It isn't that, dear. But he greases up the rug and Audrey—"

"Aw, say, sis, you seem to think Audrey's th' whole chese in this house. I can't do nothin' because of Audrey—I can't even talk out loud in the mornings 'cause it might wake Audrey." He mimicked Fanny's voice. "At gives me a pain in th' neck."

"Shh!" Fanny raised a cautioning finger. "You know Audrey needs her sleep—and besides, she doesn't have to be to work as early as I do. So she might as well sleep."

"Well, what does she do?" He asked with all the scorn a younger brother can muster. "Nothin'—nothin' but neckin' parties with her boy friends—"

"Phil, don't talk that way about your sister."

"Well, gee, didn't I see her with the guy she had here last night—gee, he's a big stiff—"

"Philip!" The use of his full name meant, to the boy, that his sister was serious, and he subsided into a temporary quiet.

The clock in the living room struck once. Fanny leaned around the table to obtain a better view of the timepiece.

"Phew!" she whistled. "Seven-thirty!" She jumped up and hurried into the hallway. "You'd better take Bicky out now," she called back to her brother.

"Yeh, just a minute," he returned, stuffing the dog with another piece of toast behind Fanny's back.

The girl opened the door past which she had been stepping so quietly. She went over to the bed and shook the recumbent figure.

"It's time to get up, Audrey," she announced gently.

The figure did not stir. Only the head, with its mass of dark hair tinged with red, stirred, shaking into activity the cropped curls that spread in gay abandon over the pillow.

"Audrey, dear, time to get up," Fanny announced again, still shaking her sister's shoulder.

"Oh, let me alone," came the muffled answer, and the head almost disappeared from sight.

"Audrey, it's half past seven. You'll be late again." The shaking became more vigorous.

"Sweet Mamma!" The head appeared again and a vigorous young arm waved Fanny away.

"Please, Audrey, darling, get up," Fanny persisted. "It's seven-thirty, and I got to go now. Come on, so I'll know you're awake before I leave. You were late yesterday, you know."

"Oh, forget it!" With a sudden jerk the mound of bedclothes came to life and Audrey Grice sat up, surveying her sister sleepily.

The contrast between the two sisters was a marked family resemblance in the shapes of their faces, in the contours of their heads, even in the color of their hair. And yet, to see the two together, one would hardly have believed that they belonged to each other. There was not very much difference in their ages—six years—and yet Audrey looked like a child, while Fanny had the mature look of a woman. Audrey had a vicious, weak beauty, while Fanny, if casually observed, might have passed for a kind, good-hearted person, but never a particularly pretty one.

There sat Audrey in a filmy silk and lace nightgown, rubber gloves on the hands that she cared for so assiduously. By the window stood Fanny, dull and drab in a dark brown dress that never could and never would become her. One of Audrey's discarded dresses that had been lovely with all the red lights of Audrey's hair and all the redness of her petulant, pouting lips, and the red flush of her cheeks to set it off. But Fanny's hair was unknown to any hairdresser, and she hadn't time to be bothering with lipstick and rouge. And so the dress only made her look slightly sallow and brown all over.

But Fanny never noticed. "Are you sure you're awake, now?" she questioned, still smiling. To her, Audrey was a symbol of everything that was beauty. She had everything that Fanny had missed—the ability and the capacity to enjoy youth. And Fanny meant to do everything that would allow her sister to have what she had always missed. Only Fanny didn't think about it quite that way. She simply loved Audrey.

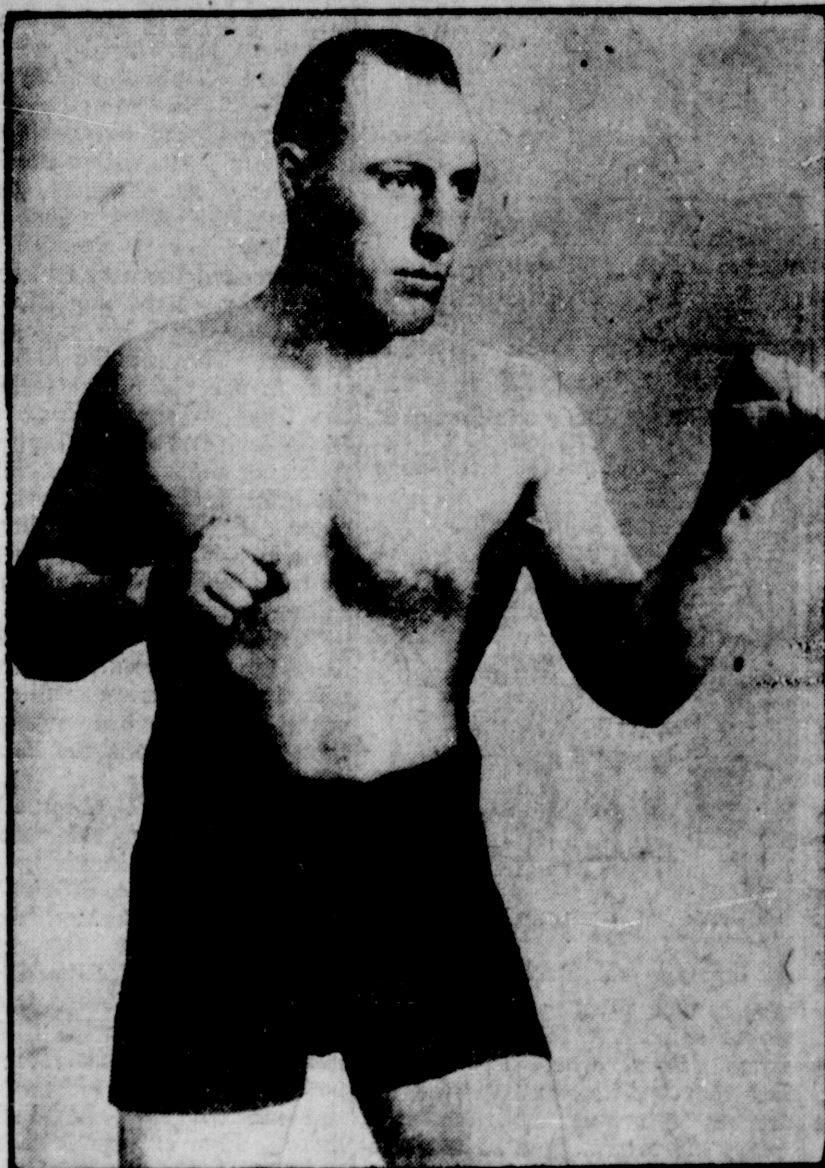

"Yes, I'm awake," the younger sister snapped, pulling off the rubber gloves and flinging them across the room.

Carefully Fanny picked up the articles and laid them on the dresser. "All right," she announced, ignoring the curt tone of her sister's voice—being, in fact, quite accustomed to hearing it every morning. "I'm going now. Will you be home for dinner?"

"How should I know?" Audrey retorted.

TEN YEARS AGO

Faber-Lohr.—Miss Minnie Lohr and Dr. Edgar M. Faber were married on Monday at the home of the bride in Salisbury, North Carolina. They are spending their honeymoon at Grove Park Inn, Asheville, and will later come to Gettysburg for the Christmas holidays.

The bride is a daughter of the Rev. Luther L. Lohr of Salisbury. She spent six years in Gettysburg, during which time she resided with Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Bender, Carlisle street, and Mrs. M. E. Zinn. She is a graduate of Lenoir college and taught a large number of pupils during her stay here, which terminated this summer when she went back to the South.

Dr. Faber is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Faber, of Chambersburg street. He was graduated from Gettysburg college in the class of 1914 and from here he went to Johns Hopkins, where he pursued post graduate work in chemistry. He earned the degree of doctor of philosophy at that institution. Dr. Faber is now identified with the Du Pont Powder company.

After their honeymoon they will go to Wilmington, where Dr. Faber has erected a new residence and where he has been located for some time.

Elect Officers.—An exceptionally good meeting of the Parent Teachers Association was held in the high school building on Friday evening, as the first one of the present school year. An interesting program was rendered.
Officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. H. T. Weaver; vice presidents, Mrs. Albert Rogers, Miss Helen Cope and Mrs. S. N. Hagen; recording secretary, Miss Grace Sachs; financial secretary, Mrs. C. B. Dougherty; treasurer, Wilson A. Bream.

President Now On French Soil.—Brest, Dec. 13.—President Wilson stepped ashore at 3:22 p. m. today. Mrs. Wilson preceded him, carrying a small flag. The "George Washington" dropped anchor at 1:36.

As the liner officially completed its historic voyage, a launch rushed out to its side and Colonel E. M. House, General Bliss, General Pershing, Admiral Benson, Admiral Wilson and Miss Margaret Wilson, the president's daughter, stepped aboard.

Home From Army.—Corporals Wilbur Geiselman and Carl Martz have returned home from the University of Pittsburgh, where they were in one of the army's technical schools.

College Board's Winter Meeting.—The passing of the Students

Army Training Corps at Gettysburg college will not mean the abandonment of all things military at the local institution. The Reserve Officers Training Corps will take its place with the resumption of work after the Christmas holidays. This was determined at the mid winter meeting of the board of trustees held in Harrisburg on Monday.

Dr. Louis S. Weaver, of York, who has been in the United States Army since the outbreak of the war was selected a member of the board. Dr. Weaver is a graduate of the college in the class of 1899. A CHRISTMAS PRAYER

Grant health to all who sigh for it,
And wealth to all who need.
Give him who dares to try for it
The strength for every deed.

Grant love to those with lack of it,
And peace to all who fret,
May those who seek the knack of it
Skill's mastery quickly get.

Dear Lord, the gifts men need the most
Are those we cannot buy.
The cries which we would heed the most
Are calls which all defy.

Oh Lord, make well and strong again
All suffering men, I pray,
That they may share the song again
And peace of Christmas day.

Uncle Lucky's garage is tight and snug,
And the Sledmobile has a buffalo rug.
And nobody cares how hard it snows,
And nobody cares how hard it blows.

The four red sleds go sliding along
And the two happy bunnies sing a song.
As faster and faster the little sleds go
Over the meadow covered with snow.

"Let's go faster!" shouted the little bunny.
He wasn't the least bit afraid when Uncle Lucky was driving.
No, indeed. The old gentleman bunny was a mighty good driver, let me tell you.
By and by, after a while and a bumpety mile, they met Turkey Tim.

"What's the matter?" asked the kind hearted old gentleman rabbit, stopping the Sledmobile. "What are you crying about?"
Turkey Tim made no answer.
No, sireeem and no, sireebus! He was too busy with his old red bandanna handkerchief. It was all to hide you away in her tiny red barn for a week and a day. By that time the Farmer will have forgotten all about selling you to anybody." So into the Sledmobile jumped the old gobbler, and away they went, with a jingle bells over the snow, slipperty, jipperty, humpty, Oh! After a time, not so very long nor so dreadfully far, they reached the dear Old Bramble Patch where lived the little rabbit with Lady Love, his pretty bunny mother. Through the little white gate in the old picket fence went the three of them, Uncle Lucky, Little Jack Rabbit and Turkey Tim, following the winding path through the briar bushes, now covered with snow. Under one big bush sat Charlie Chickadee and his bird friends, seeking shelter from the falling snowflakes.

"Gracious me!" exclaimed Lady Love, opening the kitchen door just a teeny, weeny crack. "Shake your coats and hats and stamp your feet. I don't want the house full of snow."

"All a-righty," cheerfully answered the dear old gentleman bunny, carefully knocking off the snow from the brim of his old wedding stovepipe hat. "Goodness gracious meebus! It's lucky I didn't wear it upside down by mistake!" and funny Uncle Lucky began to laugh so heartily as he hopped into the neat little kitchen that he stubbed his left hind pinky toe, the one with the rheumatiz, you know. Then of course he stopped laughing. Oh, my, yes!

As soon as he had explained matters, pretty Lady Love promised to hide Turkey Tim in the little red barn. Which she did, for she was always helping the little folk in the Shady Forest as well as taking good care of her little bunny boy. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEWS ADAMS

NAMES

MANY years ago I read of a woman who said that it would have been no trick to have named the hog—anyone could have done that!

I can think of no subject more fascinating than that of the origin of names—names of plants, flowers, stones, rivers, cities, states, books—people.

Everything has to have a name, sooner or later.

In one of Herman Melville's delightful stories he calls his three characters "Nippers," "Ginger Nut" and "Turkey," each name originating from some characteristic or habit that seemed to suggest it.

There is nothing very inspiring or wonderful about the name "Napoleon," in itself. Nor is there to any name, no matter how euphonious it may sound—until the one owning that name makes something of it!

George, or Abraham, or William sound common enough—but place Washington, Lincoln, and Gladstone after each in turn—and we are inspired by great pictures of history and all that these lives have meant to the world, and to each of us.

The mere mention of the rose, or the pansy, or the violet, arouses a sense of beauty and color within our minds that is immediately happily associated with the name itself.

Sometimes we wish that we might have named ourselves—but it wouldn't have mattered much. It wouldn't have changed us in the least. Our name is what we are, and a Percy, Clarence or Charlie does no more harm than a William, a Herbert, or a Theodore.

We know what a chair, a table or a book is—but we would know each just as well, and as lovingly, had each first been named a hoo, a jerk, or a jest.

What's in a name? Nothing beyond what it is! If it means much, then this name thrills and inspires us.

If the boy loves his "Mamie," she is the most gorgeous creature in the world!

FRIGIDAIRE PRICE IS CUT

Household Models Are Slashed As Much As $90, According To Gettysburg Dealer.

Prices of Frigidaire household models have been reduced as much as $90 according to notice that has been received from the factories at Dayton, Ohio, by Live Wire Electric Co., local representative. The general price reduction in the line averages close to ten per cent, Harry Oyle, proprietor, has been informed.

New quiet models announced late in the summer have proven exceptionally popular and have contributed to making 1928 by far the best year in the history of the organization, says the official announcement of the price cut. The new prices are carrying out the General Motors policy of passing on to the customer savings made possible by large volume production, Mr. Oyle said.

"The year 1928 has been highly satisfactory to the entire organization," he added. "There are today more Frigidaires in use than all other makes of electric refrigerators combined. Total sales for this year will set a new record. At the same time marked engineering improvements were effected. During this period the total number of Frigidaire compressors in use reached the three quarters of a million mark."

The entire sales organization is extremely gratified over the fact that the price reduction came at this particular time, Mr. Oyle said, as it will make possible for many people to include a Frigidaire in their Christmas budget, as a gift for the entire family.

At the same time prices were slashed in the line of household electric refrigerators, the corporation also announced a price cut of from $13.50 to $40 in its complete line of electrically refrigerated ice cream cabinets.

11,110 MILES IN PLYMOUTH

During his vacation this summer, Albert McMullan, one of the younger set of Palisades Park, N. J., was suddenly seized with a great desire to see America first. Without delay he translated the thought into action.

He bought a Plymouth roadster and on the same day began a cross-country tour of the United States, accompanied by his chum, Frank Ryan. One week later they were sight-seeing in Hollywood, Cal., and three weeks after the start were back home, having travelled a total of 11,100 miles.

The first day they drove 350 miles. After that they never drove less than 484 miles a day. They followed the Old National Trail to California, and after a week of rest they sped along the Pacific Highway to enjoy the beauties of Mt. Ranier and the Columbia River. The return trip was over the Custer Highway and Yellowstone Trail.

"Not once was it necessary to put a wrench to any part of the Plymouth except to change three tires," McMullan says.

"Our gasoline average for the 11,100 miles was a little better than 23 miles per gallon."

Tide Water Oil Company Announces "Hi-test Tydol" As A Premium Product.

A peep behind the scenes in a great modern petroleum refinery has been vouchsafed the public by the Tide Water Oil company in announcing its new green gasoline, Hi-Test Tydol, as a premium product at an ordinary price. Some weird looking laboratory apparatus was used in selecting the elements for a properly blended, balanced gasoline so that quick starting, rapid acceleration, anti-knock, high power and long mileage should be assured. For instance, chemists peered for hours into a glass bomb while charge after charge of gaso-

NEW WHIPPET CAR IS MADE

Interest Is Shown In Latest Willys-Overland Product In Low Priced Field.

First reports received on the welcome accorded the new Whippet fours and Whippet sixes, which were introduced a week ago by the Willys-Overland company, indicate that the Toledo manufacturer has achieved the greatest success in the twenty years history of the company. The remarkable public reception accorded the new cars in the cities where they were first shown proved clearly that Willys-Overland had struck the public fancy to a greater degree than ever before through its introduction of high priced cars and advanced mechanical features in the low priced field.

Close observers declare that this marked advancement would tend to establish a new trend of design in the Whippet price class. Although it was known that the public was in a highly receptive moor for the new models because of the outstanding reputation of the original Whippet, yet the interest that was manifested exceeded even the most optimistic expectations of Willys-Overland executives. Before the presentation of the new Whippets the interest of the public was aroused because of advance information that seeped out that in the new cars the Willys-Overland company was taking the initiative by bringing out something entirely new and totally different from anything heretofore shown in the low priced field.

at the touch of skin deep cleanliness

The beauty of a truly clean skin is something that no cosmetic can equal. A complexion that is clean deep down in the pores has the fresh glow, the clear, fine texture that is beauty itself.

Cleanliness, say authorities on the skin, depends first of all on frequent washing with hot water and pure soap. A plentiful stream of hot water for night and morning cleansing, for instance, is more than a convenience—it is a necessity for a lovely complexion. Those extra-time, all-the-time demands for hot water are supplied abundantly, dependably, when there's a

XMAS MEANS BIG BONUSES

Christmas Surprises In Wall Street Will Be The Largest In History Of Curb.

New York—(AP)—Bull markets mean bonuses to the denizens of Wall street.

They used to wait for Christmas in a prosperous year to get a bonus, these employees of Wall street houses, but this year bonuses were distributed at Thanksgiving, and even before, some workers receiving gifts equal to three weeks' pay.

Long hours and overwork have been brightened this year by the fact that Christmas bonuses probably will be the largest in history.

The humblest of employees are talking in terms of $100 bonuses, although any of them would be pleased with one ranging from a week's pay up. Many favorite stenographers and confidential secretaries have the fur coat complex, and the automobile, clothing, jewelry and other industries undoubtedly will share in the proceeds.

It has been estimated that traders' commissions alone in this year of unending bull markets will exceed $850,000,000. With the general public participating daily in the activities of the stock market, profits of commission houses also will reach a vast total.

Wall street bosses, thus making profits hand over fist, and most of them have been making profits, naturally are expected to exhibit an expansive, if expensive, spirit of Christmas, and Christmas almost always has been a synonym for bonus in Wall street.

In any event few employees are varying. Many of them, too, have participated in the orgy of speculation, and, having the advantage of "inside information" not always available to the public, undoubtedly have acquired many an extra dollar.

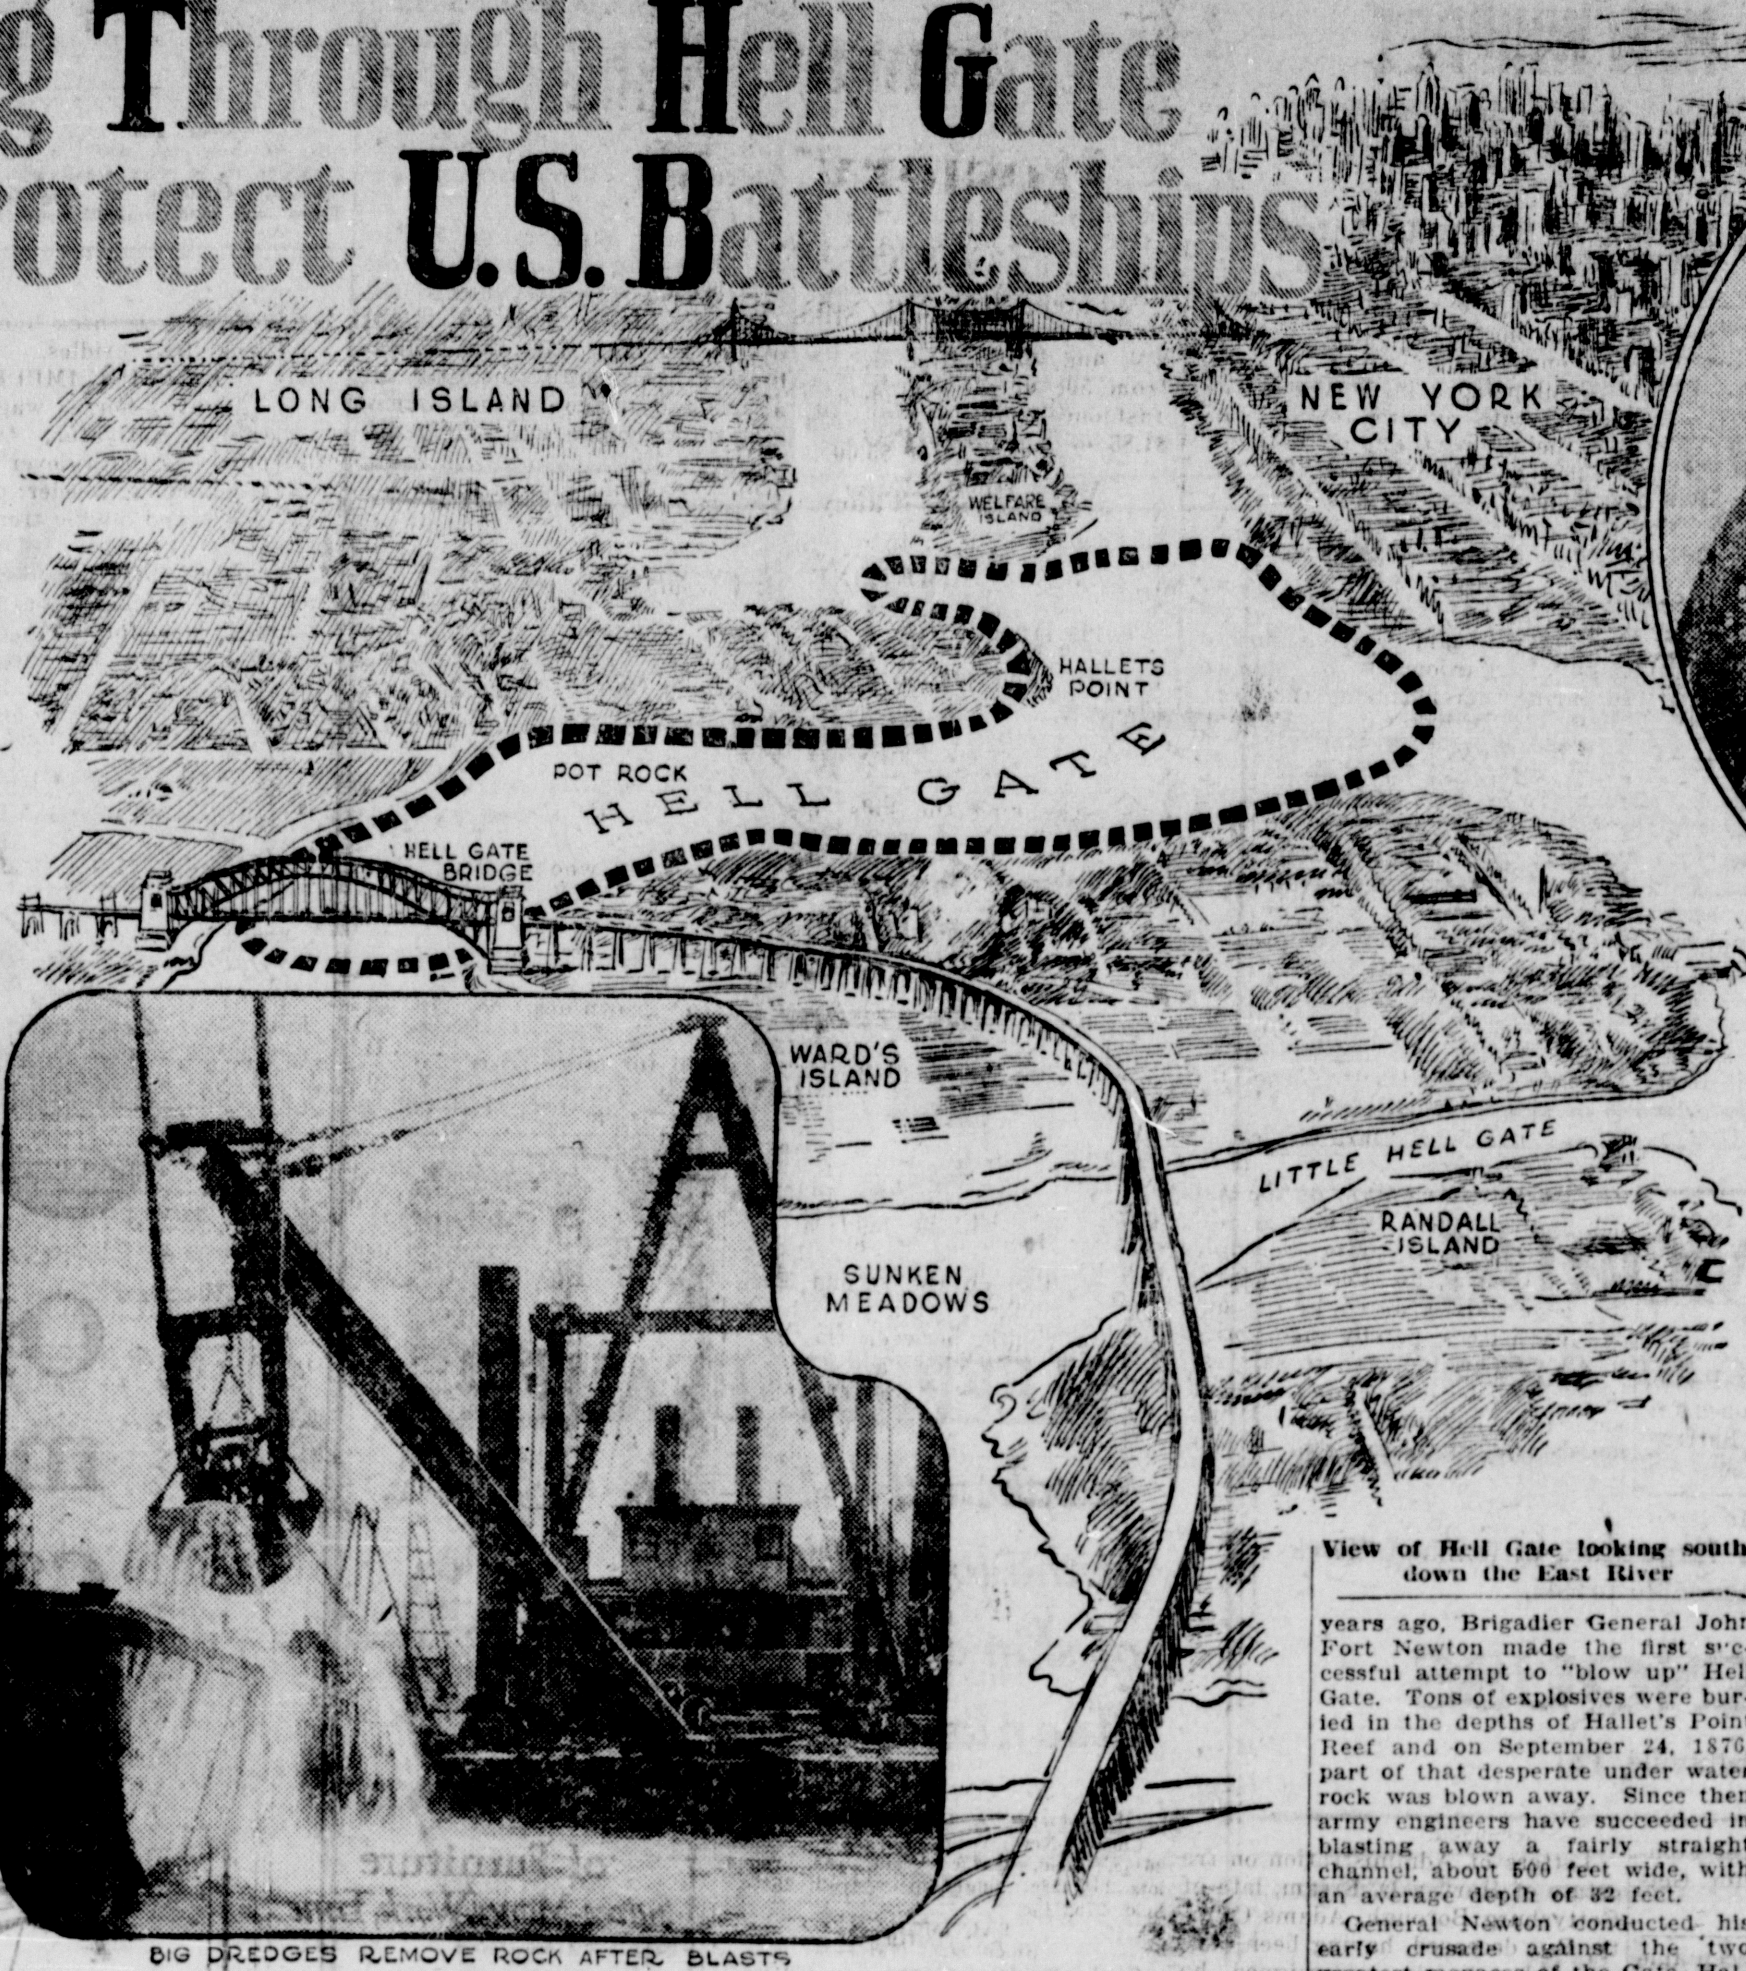

Blasting Through Hell Gate To Protect U.S. Battleships

HELL GATE, that tortuous and rock strewn strait, approximately three miles long and half a mile between Brooklyn and the part of New York City above Welfare Island, which has been a menace to navigation from the East River into Long Island Sound since way back in the days when the Dutch took over the site of Nieu Amsterdam from the Indians, is at last about to be tamed. For fifty-two years government engineers have been at the work of clearing away the ragged sunken rocks and ledges which, together with the vicious currents, have destroyed many ships and perplexed and endangered the skippers of thousands of others.

This month sees the beginning of a 10 year campaign to complete the work approved by the Government in 1917 at a total cost of $50,000,000, and which will at last make this three mile stretch of swirling water safe even for the largest warships, and incidentally prevent the possibility of part of the Atlantic fleet being bottled up in the Brooklyn Navy Yard through a bombing of the Brooklyn Bridge.

The plans, part of which are already carried out, call for a 40 foot channel at mean low water running through the lower New York Bay to the Brooklyn Navy Yard and, from there up the East River and through Hell Gate, a thirty-five foot channel varying from 550 to 1,000 feet in width. This will clear the way for all merchant vessels except such monsters as the Leviathan and Majestic, and all war vessels. The treacherous cross currents, the meeting of the swirling tidal waters swept in from Long Island Sound at one end and from Sandy Hook on the other, which even today sweeps many ships on the bordering rocks and shoals, will be controlled to a large extent by the presence of a wide deep channel through which the biggest ships can steam to safety.

One hundred and seventy thousand yards of rock must be blasted away to create this 35 foot deep channel. 1,000,000 pounds of dynamite being the estimated amount necessary for the next two years' work. Following the method used in recent years for such work, holes will be bored in the rock beneath the water with hydraulic drills operated from the decks of special drill boats anchored over the spot. The holes will be ten feet apart and about ten feet deep. Into these holes, five by sixteen size mitted the supporting pillars, the roof collapsed, leaving a 26 foot channel. It took nearly seven years.

Next he turned his attention to Flood Rock which was in the middle of the Gate and which covered about nine acres. Four miles of tunnels through that rock were bored over a period of ten years. There were, at the end of the work, 294,000 tons of rock left and it took 288,936 pounds of explosive distributed in over 44,000 copper cartridges to blow it down.

One of the outcomes of these great excavations and blastings was the invention by Gen. Newton of the steam drill, which is said to be the first of its kind and which was the precursor of the present effective rock drills.

The work of fighting the battle of Hell Gate was taken up, after Gen. Newton's death in 1895, by other army engineers and has been going on ever since. It has been, in many of its phases, one of the most stubborn and picturesque encounters between man and Nature that was ever undertaken on this continent. Always Hell Gate has been a source of danger and anxiety to the merchant craft that ply from the East River docks of Brooklyn and Manhattan up into Long Island Sound, making for the various ports along the Connecticut shore, or seeking an outlet to the deep sea through fifty miles of inside route.

But greater worryment has been caused in the War and Navy Departments because of the danger that a hostile fleet, threatening the Port of New York might, with proper luck, succeed in bottling part of the U. S. fleet in the local Navy Yard just below the Brooklyn Bridge. Only the smaller craft could get into Long Island Sound, the seaward entrance to which is easily protected by mine fields. That, and the constant injury to shipping in general, is the reason the government has been so persistent over the years in trying to make Hell Gate safe for all manner of craft.

Even after the channel is finished, the three miles of narrow waters, the meeting place of two tides which surge back and forth through the narrow strait, there being sometimes as much as two feet difference in mean highwater between the Battery at the end of Manhattan Island and Throgs neck near the Gate, will be a place that requires good navigation, although the hidden rocks will be moved and to some extent swirls will be conquered.

Colds, Coughs, Dangerous
This Time Of Year—
Stop It Quick.

KIDS LIKE TO TAKE THIS SIMPLY REMEDY

"My children love to take the cough and cold remedy our old doctor recommended. It banishes a cold, fortifies them all winter, and helps their appetites."

There is no dope, alcohol, chloroform, etc., in it. A barrel of it would do no harm. Almost like ice-cream and tastes so nice kids cry for Lin-O-Nine, which contains wholesome, beneficial Oils of Flaxseed, Eucalyptus, Cassia, Betula, Irish Moss and Glycerine, churned into a cream flavored with Wintergreen. Yum! Yum! It's good, the kiddies say, according to thousands of wise mothers who always have a bottle of Lin-O-Nine in the house. Better than Cod Liver Oil as a tonic—and it tastes nice.

Doctors recommend Lin-O-Nine for grown-ups, too. 50c and $1.00 sizes at druggists, or send dollar bill for large 15-oz. bottle, parcels post return mail. Kerr Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md.—adv.

Speak right up... tell him you want a HOOVER

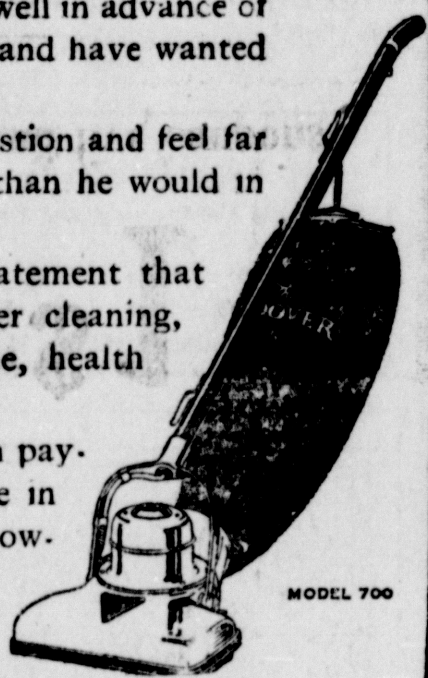

If you are still waiting for that Hoover you have hoped to get each Christmas for several years, the possibilities are that you haven't adopted the right method.

The average husband isn't an expert mind reader. Your predicament calls for bolder strategy. Tell him well in advance of the eventful day that you want a Hoover—and have wanted it for a long, long while.

He will be glad to have such a sane suggestion and feel far more competent to make such a purchase than he would in the selection of some feminine trinket.

He will see the wisdom, too, of your statement that The Hoover, with its faster, easier, deeper cleaning, will contribute immeasurably to your time, health and happiness.

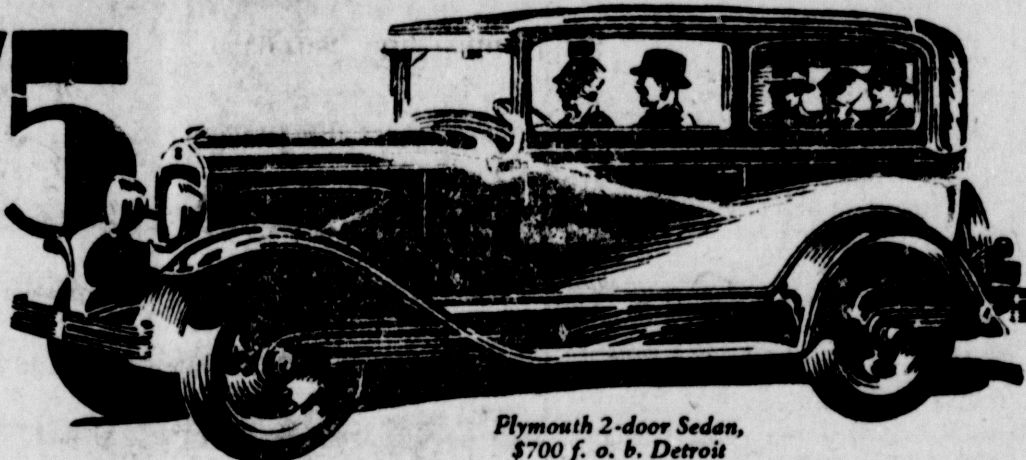

The Hoover may be purchased for a down payment of only $6.25; the balance is payable in small monthly sums. There is a liberal allowance for old cleaners. And there are three fine models from which to choose, all with "Positive Agitation."
